PINOT NOIR

In my opinion, there is no other variety quite like Pinot Noir. Its temperamental nature reflects my personality. The origins of the grape come from its dark skin that reflect the dark night when it should be picked, and the tight clusters that grow like a pine cone. It is these tight clusters that make Pinot Noir so difficult to grow. At its best, it should be ethereally aromatic, with florals, cherries, raspberries, rhubarb and forest floor. The following Pinot Noirs have all this in spades, and traverse the structural Burgundian style trough to the suppleness and opulence of the new world.
